Adolescent Girls Initiative (AGI) Managing and Implementing the Survey for the impact evaluation assignment - Economic empowerment of Ado- lescent girls project

Country: Liberia
Client: WB
Year: 11/2009 09/2012
Partners: SBA

In March 2009 the first project of the World Bank's Adolescent Girls Initiative (AGI) has been launched, piloted in Liberia through a partnership between the World Bank, the Nike Foundation and the Governments of Liberia and Denmark. The AGI strives to promote the economic empowerment of older adolescent girls and young women by smoothing their path to productive employment.

AVEDIS in association with SBA and GOPA were now awarded the management and implementation of the survey for the impact evaluation assignment of this pilot project.

The objective of this assignment is to administer the surveys, process the data and deliver the database required for the impact evaluation of training offered in business development skills and job skills to adolescent girls and young women aged 15-24 in order to empower them with the skills, experience and support networks necessary for successful self-employment.
