

Development of a Model for “Systemic Youth Violence Prevention”

Country: Multi Country
Client: GTZ
Year: 2008 – 2009

AVEDIS was contracted by the GTZ sector project “Child and Youth Rights” to assist a team of programmers in the GTZ programme department from different sectors (Steering Committee) to define a strategic and methodological framework for youth violence prevention, which is a relatively new field for German development cooperation and therefore there are just few tried and tested approaches and methods. The result of this participatory process was a model on “systemic youth violence prevention” that could be applied in different settings by German development projects.
